

Introduction to Revelation

The Apostle John, the "beloved" of Jesus, authored the book of Revelation about A.D. 95, 64 years after Christ's death. While he was a prisoner on the island of Patmos, a prison colony in the Aegean Sea off the coast of Greece, God gave him the visions recorded in the book of Revelation. John was about 85 years old, and the last surviving apostle.

At this time most of the people who were witnesses to Jesus' life and ministry here on earth were in their graves. In the Roman Empire Christianity had spread and flourished, but now worship of the Emperor as a god was being enforced more stringently and the church was enduring some of the fiercest persecution it had yet known.

The word "Revelation," or "apocalypse," means an unveiling of the future. Revelation reveals the issues and events involved in the ongoing conflict between God and Satan. In another sense, it is a revelation of Jesus Christ, portraying Him as the Lamb who died to take away sin, as the High Priest and Minister in the great heavenly sanctuary, as the Supreme Judge in the final judgment, and as the King of Kings and Lord of Lords reigning over the universal paradise restored. Revelation continues the themes found in Daniel; both books present views of prophetic panoramas that sweep from the prophet's time to
